

Same-sex accommodation

Easy Read guide

If you sleep in one of our buildings you have a right to private space. Having private spaces is important because it helps people to feel safe and relaxed.

Sometimes men and women stay in the same building. It is important that there is private space for men and private space for women. This is called same-sex accommodation. We show private spaces by using signs.

Everyone has their own bedroom. Your bedroom will not be shared by anyone else.

Your toilet and bathroom should be easy to find. They should be close to your bedroom. If you don't know where your bathroom is then ask a staff member.

If you don't feel safe at any time then you must speak to a staff member. All of our staff are trained. They know about same-sex accommodation, and know how to help to keep you safe.

“You just feel more relaxed with only women around.”
Female patient, 30-45

“It's a stressful time. The less stress you can have, the better you're going to be.”
Male patient, 65+
