A data processor is the identified individual or organisation who processes personal information on behalf of the Trust.

To do so, this requires:

A legal binding data processing contract with the data controller. The contract must include the following items:

- Duration of the use of personal information
- Nature and purpose of use
- Categories of individuals whose personal information are being used
- Type of personal information
- Obligation and rights of the data controller
- Security measures and controls to put in place for use of the information as defined in Article 32
- Return of the data to the data controller at termination of the contract

If the data processor undertakes any sub-contracting of the data processing, this has to be with prior approval of the data controller.
